STERLINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Two Erie Railroad passenger trains collided head-on today, killing five persons and injuring at least 27 others. The accident occurred when one train missed orders to wait for the other to get off its track.

Wrecking crews were using torches to cut open a twisted coach where a man and a woman were reportedly dead.

The railroad said the dead included three crew members of the train that didn't wait—No. 50, a commuter train from Monroe, N.Y., to Hoboken, N.J.

It identified them as Sam Nardo, engineer; Martin J. Walsh, fireman, and Charles G. Mitchell, brakeman. It said the conductor, J. Bower, first reported killed was among the injured.

The accident occurred this way according to the railroad:

A freight train at this station blocked the westbound track for train No. 53, a combination passenger and mail train bound for Port Jervis, N.Y., from Hoboken. Train 53 was switched to the eastbound track and orders sent to hold No. 50 at Suffern, four miles west of here.

The orders didn't get there in time, and No. 50 and No. 53 collided.

Sterlington is about 30 miles northwest of New York City, across the Hudson river, and just north of the New Jersey-New York state line.

The conductor of train No. 53, George Sutton of Port Jervis, was taken to Good Samaritan Hospital in Suffern in critical condition. Sixteen other persons, including additional crew members of train 53 also were taken to Good Samaritan.

Denies U. S. Jet Flew Over Syria

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A U.S. Navy spokesman today denied a charge that an American jet plane penetrated Syrian air space Sunday.

The charge was made in a dispatch from Damascus of the Cairo Middle East News Agency. The dispatch said a Syrian anti-aircraft battery drove the plane back.

The Navy spokesman told a news conference: "No American plane was even near the Syrian border, and we have received no reports of an American aircraft being fired on."

Gromyko, 75 Aides Plan Big UN Drive

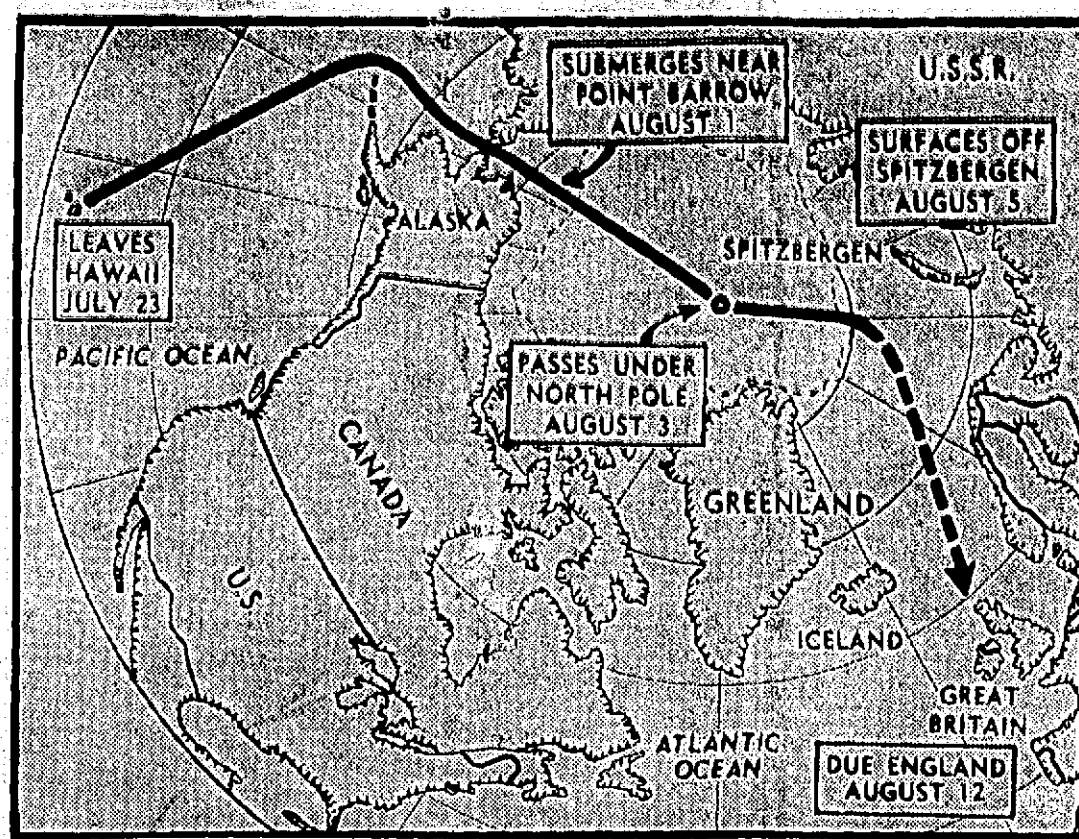

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and 75 aides prepared today for a drive to get the U.N. General Assembly's emergency session to demand withdrawal of U.S. troops from Lebanon and British troops from Jordan.

Gromyko was expected to speak early in the general debate which starts Wednesday. He said on his arrival from Moscow Sunday that the Soviet government considers the question of the withdrawals very serious and his delegation will do their best. . . to achieve positive results.

Asian nationalists were reported seeking some means of inducing the Western powers to pull their troops out quickly so the Assembly could concentrate on other Middle Eastern problems. The group holds the balance of power in the 81-nation Assembly.

There was some belief that enlargement of the U.N. border observance corps in Lebanon might get U.S. forces out of there. They admitted Jordan was a tougher problem.

ALC to Air Several Proposals

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Legislative Council will meet here Friday to consider several proposals, among them a suggestion that it study the feasibility of making state cigarette taxes deductible on federal income tax returns.

Rep. Chadd L. Durrett of Union County said Arkansas' cigarette tax law could be amended to allow residents to deduct the 6-cent-a-package state tax.

Residents now are not permitted to deduct the levy because it is an indirect tax.

Before the council meets, four council committees will go into session Thursday to consider recommending studies on other matters:

1. The handling of recalcitrant tuberculosis patients.

2. Whether it should recommend that the Legislature pass laws to require that a certain portion of local school revenues be set aside for the payment of teachers' salaries and for other instructional purposes.

3. Whether to re-establish its policy of preparing a budget for the 1959-61 biennium which will not exceed anticipated revenues.

4. Whether it should recommend tighter laws for the regulation of boats on state lakes and streams.

5. How to regulate the taking of sand and gravel from trout streams.

6. Whether additional money will be required for the acquisition of land for the Pea Ridge National Park.

7. Whether the chairman of the Legislative Joint Auditing Committee shall be an ex-officio member of the council during its budgetary sessions.

8. Whether the state should participate in the activities of the Regional Council on Mental Health Training and Research, an organization of the Southern Regional Education Board.

9. Whether Congress enacts new legislation, the planting allotments of both cotton and rice will be reduced sharply next year—cuts that Secretary of Agriculture Benson said last week would be disastrous.

A major farm bill passed by the Senate last month would have prevented much of the acreage reduction and also would have permitted a lowering of government price supports.

A less sweeping bill substituted Dist. Atty. Don A. Tabbert briefed for the Senate measure also would have assured larger plantings. But the House rejected the bill last week when it was called up under a procedure requiring a two-thirds majority for passage.

Noting that the bill received a numerical majority, Sen. George Aiken (R-Vt.) said in a separate interview he is confident most House members will vote for something close to the Senate bill if leaders will give them a chance.

Lightning strikes House, Loss $1,000

Lightning struck the home of Mr. and Mrs. Top Porter Friday, resulting in a fire that caused an estimated $1,000 damage. Firemen said the fire burned up a television set and damaged floor and paneling in the room. The damage was confined to the one room.

The annual election is sponsored by the Little Rock Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Tuesday night's street election party will begin as soon as it is dark enough to use the projection screen between 7 and 7:30 p.m. and broadcasting will start at 7:30 p.m.

Admission to use the property across the street from The Star Building on which to hang the big screen has already been given to First National Bank, property owner, and Fisher & Gaines, auctioneers. A new screen has been built this year by Hope Sign & Neon Service.

State Violent Death Toll Reaches 12

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A drowning, two highway fatalities and a shooting yesterday boosted Arkansas' violent death toll to 13 for the week ended last night.

Fifteen-year-old Douglas Johnson drowned when he stepped into deep water at a swimming hole near Bradford Johnson, who lived near Bald Knob, could not swim. The body was recovered.

Yesterday's highway fatalities were the first of the seven-day period.

The first occurred early yesterday when an automobile careened off state Highway 6 near Mountain Home, slammed into two trees and overturned on top of the driver, Hale Wayne Kankey, 32, was killed. He was a resident of Wideman in Izard County.

Later in the day, a Jonesboro teenager was killed when he was hit by a pickup truck on state Highway 18 near his home. The victim was Larry Williams, 15, the son of W. W. Williams.

State trooper Burton Jackson said the youth was riding a bicycle on the highway when a car approached him from the front and a truck from the rear. The trooper said Williams apparently became panicky, jumped from his bike and was struck by the truck.

Driver of the vehicle was Bob George, 37, of Jonesboro. He was returning members of the Needham Baptist Church baseball team from a game at Paragould.

A 23-year-old Negro was shot to death yesterday at Reydon, near Pine Bluff, in an argument police said started over a $7.00 debt.

Dead is Tommy Lee Williams. Police said he was shot once in the stomach with a small caliber pistol during an argument with Felix Brooks, 51, also a Negro.

Sheriff Harold Norton said he had jailed Brooks on an open charge in connection with the shooting.

GOPs to Hold First Primary in Arkansas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Final rounds of handshaking and speechmaking were scheduled by office-seekers today on the eve of the state's first dual primary.

Tomorrow for the first time Republicans will cast votes in a statewide primary to select a candidate to oppose Gov. Orval Faubus in the November general election.

No one would venture an estimate on the expected turnout of GOP voters, but estimates of the Democratic vote were generally around 300,000.

The Democrats will choose two state Supreme Court justices and a state treasurer in the only contested statewide races. All other offices either were filled in the July 28 first primary or the incumbents face no opposition.

Other contests involve a congressman and several district and local offices.

Republicans will choose between George W. Johnson, a 75-year-old Greenwood attorney, and Donald D. Layne, a 34-year-old Little Rock civil engineer, in their gubernatorial race.

The Democrats' Supreme Court race will pit Associate Justice J. F. McDuffin against Griffin Smith Jr. of Little Rock and Associate Justice Minor Millwee against Jim Johnson of Crossett.

State Treasurer J. Vance Clayton is opposed by Edd Taylor of McCrory in the only other contested state post.

Every County Office Is Contested as Voters Go to the Polls on Tuesday

White Okayed as Head of Civil Rights Division

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 7-4 today to approve the nomination of W. Wilson White to head the Justice Department's new civil rights division. Four absentees will be polled before the vote is closed.

One more "yes" vote—a majority of the committee's 15 members—is needed to report the nomination favorable to the Senate.

The Philadelphia lawyer's nomination has been bottled in the committee since President Eisenhower submitted it Jan. 13. It has become involved in the controversy over Eisenhower's sending troops to enforce a court order for integration of Central High School in Little Rock, Ark.

White, as an assistant attorney general, gave the White House legal advice on the power to use the troops.

Sen. John L. McClellan of Arkansas and three other Southern Democrats voted against confirmation.

Those absent when the committee vote was taken were Sens. Thomas Hennings (D-Mo.), Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.), John M. Butler (R-Md.) and Roman Krush (R-Neb).

The committee announced the vote of those present was:

In favor of confirmation—Sens. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), John A. Carroll (D-Colo.), Arthur V. Watkins (R-Utah), William Jenner (R-Ind.), Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.), William Langer (R-N.D.) and Everett Dirksen (R-Ill.).

Against confirmation—Sens. McClellan, James O. Eastland (D-Miss.), Olin D. Johnston (D-SC), and Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-NC).

Ervin said he had voted not because "I am not willing to put anyone in a position of enforcing so-called civil rights laws who thinks that federal troops should be used for that purpose."

White took office last Dec. 9 under a recess appointment. But he will automatically go off the payroll if no action is taken on his nomination by the time Congress adjourns, possibly at the end of this week.

He could be given another recess appointment, but he would not be able to draw any salary.

Last September, when Eisenhower sent troops to Little Rock to quell mob resistance to the school integration order, White was an assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel.

In that post, he directed research on the President's powers to use troops. In the face of hostile questioning by Southern members of the Judiciary committee, he was defended the legality of Eisenhower's action.

White described the use of troops as a last resort. But he refused to say they should not be used in any circumstances such as those which arose at Little Rock.

Gamblers Called Into Investigation

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — U. S. Dist. Atty. Don A. Tabbert briefed a federal grand jury this morning on the government's aims in a lengthy probe of a Terre Haute gambling syndicate's operations.

Beginning later today, the southern Indiana district jurors will hear testimony from 180 witnesses, including more than 160 bookies and bettors from throughout the nation.

The government's only interest in establishing the fact that the Terre Haute group handled bets on football and other sports and the amount of money it handled, Tabbert has estimated it grossed 3½ million dollars before federal agents put it out of business in a raid last Nov. 29.

Among others is K. Barney Levine, operator of Westwood Club near Little Rock, Ark.

Marlton Hospital. Ambulance crews treated those with minor injuries.

A number of persons were taken to Tuxedo Hospital. The railroad said No. 53 had only four or five passengers on it, explaining why the preponderance of injured were from the other train.

STERLINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Five persons were killed and at least 25 injured today when two Erie Railroad passenger trains crashed head on as the result of a missed signal.

Two of the victims were passengers, a man and woman. Their bodies were cut from the wreckage of the first car on a four-coach commuter train bound from Monroe, N.Y., to Hoboken, N.J.

They were identified as Robert Youchman of Warwick, N.Y.; and Pauline Cronon, of Tuxedo, N.Y.

The other victims were Sam Nardo, engineer; Charles G. Mitchell, a brakeman; and Martin J. Walsh, a fireman.

The two diesel locomotives telescoped but neither the locomotives nor the cars were derailed. Several coaches piled together and some of the wheel trucks lifted off the roadbed.

The second train comprised three baggage and three passenger cars in which only a few persons were riding. There were about 30 riders on the commuter train.

The wreck occurred on the Erie main line in a rural section of Rockland county, about 35 miles northwest of New York City, shortly before 7 a.m.

One of the first rescue squads to reach the scene was the Hillburn Fire Department.

One of its members, Robert Lillibridge, said: "People were staggering around, moaning and groaning. Lost of them looked dazed. A number were stretcher cases."

A really of ambulances and emergency vehicles rushed the injured to Good Samaritan Hospital, Suffern, N.Y.; and Tuxedo hospital. Others received first aid at the scene.

Robert Higgins, one of the less seriously injured, was at work sorting mail on one train.

"The only warning I got was when the emergency brake went on," he said.

"I heard the hissing of air. The next thing there was this crash and I was on the floor."

"I managed to walk out. Others with me had to be carried out."

The wreck, according to a spokesman at Erie railroad headquarters in Hoboken, resulted because a freight train was standing on one of the two tracks near the Sterlington freight station.

The combination baggage-passenger train, No. 53, bound from Hoboken to Port Jervis, N.Y., was routed onto the other track, and instructions were sent to hold the commuter train, No. 50, traveling in the opposite direction, at Suffern. The order apparently did not arrive in time.

STERLINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — Five persons were reported killed and at least 22 injured today in the head-on crash of two passenger trains of the Erie Railroad. Sterlington is about 30 miles northwest of New York City, across the Hudson river and just north of the New Jersey - New York state line.

Police at Ridgefield, N.J., heard a radio report that priests from the Don Bosco monastery at Ramsey, N.Y., were being sent to the scene to administer last rites.

Good Samaritan Hospital at nearby Suffern said some of the injured were being brought there, but had no further information.

One of the trains involved in the wreck was bound from Hoboken, N.J., to Port Jervis, N.Y. The other was bound from Monroe, N.Y., to Hoboken.

State Police said first aid crews and ambulances from North Jersey and New York points were converging on the scene.

At the Erie's office in New York City, a spokesman said the wreck resulted in mixed signals while trying to get eastbound passenger train No. 50, bound for Hoboken, around a freight train on the east-bound track. No. 50 was switched to the westbound track.

Westbound passenger train No. 53 was ordered held at Suffern, the spokesman said, but the order

The girl on summer vacation is wise to take along a variety of blouses like these. They take up small space in a suitcase, allow her a complete wardrobe change without fuss or bother. This girl wears (left) a blouse in fine dacron-and-pima batiste with frilly bib effect of lace ruffles and embroidered panels. At the seaside, the sleeveless, striped shirt (center) in dacron-and-pima is ideal. This one has extra-long shirtdolls for a smooth tuck-in. Triangular yoke (right) is worked into shoulder-capping for a blouse with fragile look. Yoke is done in lace-and-eyelot panels. This, like the other Judy Bond blouses shown here, is in a drip-dry dacron and pima batiste. All three will provide maximum wear with very little care on a vacation.

Half-circle aprons become keepsakes at conclusion of this coffee-and-cake party. Aprons are not difficult to make.

DOROTHY DIX

A Good Stiff Bolster Is Medicine for Week-Willed Man

Dear Dorothy Dix:

My husband is a smart man with a good education, but he has fallen into a rut as far as his job is concerned. He sells insurance, working seven days and seven evenings a week. We see him for an hour at dinner, then he's out for another appointment. With all this working, he manages to bring home the vast amount of sixty dollars, which is supposed to feed three of us. Oh, yes — he also has considerable expense for gas and oil, since he needs the car in his work. He's been doing this for six years; don't you think it's time for a change. He claims he's satisfied and won't listen to me when I suggest that he get another job. Naturally I've had to pick up odd jobs so we could eat but I'd rather be a full-time mother.

Jennifer: My guess is that your husband lacks confidence in himself and, poor as the pickings are in his job, he's afraid they would be less elsewhere. Your job is to bolster him. Instead of complaining about the inadequate income, the fact that your family life is nil, or the tremendous load you are carrying, stress the fact that his talents are being wasted in the insurance business. Help him analyze his position and to discover what he's better fitted for. Salesmanship apparently is not his field.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

While my husband has a good job, he doesn't make as much money as I think he should. This I attribute to the fact that he has no sense of humor. I have tried to develop this trait in him but without success. Don't you agree that in this modern world one must have a sense of humor to get along?

Dorothy: A sense of humor is a gift from God. Those who have it are blessed; those who haven't can no more cultivate it than a person can develop a good singing voice or a talent for painting. However, if your husband can't make with the quips himself, he can learn to appreciate people who are witty. After all, funny men need audiences and people like your husband can always be one of the crowd.

Dear Dorothy Dix:

My husband is a Baptist and is apparently never got through.

He said one brakeman, not identified, was killed, but he had not other reports of fatalities.

He said the diesel pulled trains had from five to six cars each.

present I sing in the Methodist choir. Since the religions are similar, don't you think he should attend church with me? He attends his own church.

Annabelle: Should your husband change churches every time you get a new choir job? Be glad he's a regular churchgoer and let him attend the church of his choice.

Negro Held in Rape of White Woman

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — A white woman told police she was raped by a Negro at her home in the Wright community yesterday. Sheriff Harold Norton today said a 35-year-old Negro ex-convict had signed a statement admitting the assault.

Norton said Miles Clarence Allen of Pastoria, who was released April 26 from state prison, was being held here on an open charge. He said formal charges would not be filed until Prosecutor R. W. Brockman Jr. returned to Pine Bluff from vacation.

Allen served part of a five year sentence from Pulaski County on a conviction of attempted robbery and burglary before he was released from the penitentiary this year, Norton said.

The 20-year-old woman told police the intruder broke into her home before dawn yesterday. Her husband was on duty with the Arkansas National Guard at Camp Robinson near Little Rock and her four children were asleep in another room.

She said her assailant hit her twice with a wrench when she

NAACP Moves to Block Bennet

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett, faced with a development that threatened to disrupt the sequence of his legal drive against the NAACP, canceled a scheduled court session today.

Bennett had planned to take depositions—sworn testimony—from eight witnesses today in connection with his suits against the Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc., an organization of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

But Roy Finch Jr., Bennett's chief assistant, said the session was called off because of counter legal action filed by Thurgood Marshall of New York, NAACP chief legal counsel.

Finch referred to Marshall's objections to a set of 21 questions directed to him by Bennett. The Negro attorney answered two of the questions and objected to the others on grounds that they were improper inquiries into fund activities.

It's up to Pulaski Circuit Court to decide whether Marshall must answer the other questions, and Finch said Bennett does not want to take depositions from others until he has Marshall's answers.

Most of the questions dealt with what the attorney general has described as a "task force" of NAACP officials who he said came into Arkansas in 1954 and 1955 to study attitudes toward integration.

Bennett's suits, filed in Pulaski Circuit Court, seeks to stop the fund's alleged illegal practice of law in Arkansas and to have a $5,000 penalty assessed against the fund for its alleged failure to register to do business in the state.

The depositions today were to be taken from eight persons whom Bennett has subpoenaed.

They are Mrs. L. C. Bates of Little Rock, state president of the NAACP; Mrs. Birdie Williams of North Little Rock, president of that city's NAACP chapter; Wiley Branton of Pine Bluff, a Negro attorney; Gwendolyn Floyd of Little Rock, principal of Booker T. Washington School; Teresa Warren of Brinkley, a teacher at Marian Anderson High School; Thad Williams of Little Rock, a Negro attorney who has represented the fund; D. L. Grace of Fort Smith, an attorney in an integration case at Van Buren, and Bertha Pitts of DeWitt.

Appointee Can't Run for the Office

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An appointee to elective office cannot resign and then run as a candidate for the same position, the attorney general's office said today.

In an opinion requested by Justice of the Peace Ray Howell of Navehden, Asst. Atty. Gen. Roy Finch wrote that such procedure is prohibited by a constitutional Amendment 20, which forbids appointees to elective offices from succeeding themselves.

Howell had asked if he could resign and file for the same office.

Finch said in another opinion that the Huntsville Christian Church is subject to Huntsville's building code even though work on the church building had started before the code was adopted.

The Navy yesterday notified his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Johnson, of his death.

"I know he is a man of peace and he will always struggle for peace," Kamel told reporters.

Waldo Man Killed in Drilling Mishap

STEPHENS, Ark. (AP)—J. D. Sharp, 40, of Route 3, Waldo, was killed in an oil field accident here today.

A high pressure water hose used in drilling operations broke and struck Sharp in the head with such force that he died instantly.

U. S. Prodded About A-Attack Shelters

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress and the Eisenhower administration have been prodded to get going on a multibillion-dollar program of building shelters to protect Americans against nuclear attack.

Otherwise, a House Government Operations subcommittee said, "our country stands in mortal danger."

In a report released Sunday, the group criticized present plans of federal civil defense officials to build 40 sample shelters against radioactive fallout for states and local interests to copy.

On this, the report said: "The subcommittee will not lend its endorsement to any pretense that this policy promises nationwide protection against nuclear weapons effects in the foreseeable future."

"An ostrich-like policy will not save American lives and property."

Woman to Head Civil Service

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower today nominated Barbara Bates Gunderson, Republican national committee woman from South Dakota, to be a Civil Service commissioner.

Mrs. Gunderson, 41, would replace Bernard L. Flanagan, who resigned recently under congressional charges that he falsified his government employment application forms.

THE STORY: Lieutenant Morrison continues his questioning of the neighbors of 13-year-old Bruce Adams who was brutally murdered. Next family on his list is Craig and Candie Jannsen.

CHAPTER XII

Callie Jannsen was relieved to find her husband gone when she awoke. The scene of the night before was still fresh in her memory, and as she put the coffee water on she couldn't help but wonder about him.

He couldn't have done it, of course, but he had given no explanation of his whereabouts at the time the boy was supposed to have been killed, and his violent action in destroying the pottery figure made her think of how he acted toward children sometimes.

Having no children of her own had always been a great disappointment. She and Craig had little in the way of companionship, but she firmly believed the presence of a child in the house would have solved all their problems.

Craig hadn't understood. He had been nasty about her having them in the house on those rare occasions when he came home to dinner.

"You won't learn to entertain my friends properly, but you expect me to stumble over a bunch of brats every time I come home," he had raged.

When the coffee was poured into the pot to drip, she got dressed and arranged the many curls she affected. This done, she poured heavy cream over a bowl of cereal and started to toast. She liked to read the morning paper while she ate.

No known motive, the black headlines read. She permitted herself a laylike shudder, and began to read the printed account avidly.

No mutilation, it read, the boy died from strangulation, and they knew of no reason for him slipping away from his home so late at night.

The police were working around the clock and expected a break in the case at any time. They were lying, of course. She knew they were lying. It was only reasonable that it was the work of a man with a deranged mind. Craig's reaction when she had voiced her opinion had only served to bolster her opinion. There was nothing wrong with Craig's mind, but even he must agree that he was a man of almost uncontrollable passions, and she knew from personal experience that some men sought the company of a woman just for pleasant conversation, and the restful feeling she could give, away from the bustle of the outside world.

With jogging steps she checked the locks, then gathered her housekeeping equipment. The vacuum was connected and ready to go, when the doorbell rang.

She hesitated at the door, then called, loudly, "Who is it?"

"Lieutenant Morrison from the police. I'd like to talk to you, May I come in?"

After unlocking the door, she opened it a crack and peered out. The badge, pinned to the man's buffed, was visible, so she opened the door farther.

"I'm sorry to seem inhospitable, but after the murder one can't be too careful. Come in, Lieutenant."

When they were seated, Morrison asked if he might smoke. He was immediately sorry.

She couldn't remember where she had put the ash tray, and when she finally found it, he sat and waited while she moved plants and statuettes, so there would be a place to put it.

"It's about Bruce Adams —"

"Wasn't it horrible?" she interrupted. "And he was such a sweet boy too. It isn't many boys nowadays, that are interested in the arts, and he took his music so seriously."

"You knew him well, then?"

"He was over here quite often. I try to keep tidbits for the children when they come over. He was always very fond of my cream cakes. I can see him yet sitting in front of the record player, listening to my husband's records of Isaac Stern and eating my cakes."

"Then you know of no reason why someone would have disliked

Bruce though to harm him?"

"There was no reason," she said dramatically. "A person that could work such outrages and mutilate that poor little body is an insane person."

He went through some of his favorite swear words, in his mind, then remarked in a deceptively soft voice, "It was a simple strangulation, Mrs. Jannsen."

"I understand," she answered in a confidential tone. "You don't date let the public know what happened."

He had a choice. He could either get out or tell the woman what he thought of her and her kind, so he got to his feet and went quickly to the door.

She was disappointed that he was leaving. "I'll call you if I think of anything. The sooner you catch him, the sooner we can sleep safe in our beds. Have you talked to my husband? He was out the night of the murder. Not that he had anything to do with it, you understand."

"Some of the other men will see him today," he answered and went briskly to the car.

"Have a nice day?" he snapped, when he reached the car.

"Haven't been sleeping this time," she answered. "I've been sitting here counting the times those screw dimes run to the window to peek out. The Taylor woman is ahead, with 13 trips. What do they expect to see?"

"A sex fiend, after their pretty pink bodies," Morrison explained sourly.

Chapter XIII

Morrison looked at the school as Seniors pulled to a stop in the parking lot. It was a modern design, built of sand-colored bricks and wide expanses of glass.

He pushed open the glass door and located a sign pointing the way to the principal's office. He found the door, knocked and went in.

It was a small, pleasant office, with a good-sized desk, behind which sat a pretty blonde girl. The sign on the desk read "Miss Trask."

He pulled his credentials from his pocket and showed them to her.

"I'm Lieutenant Morrison. I'd like to speak to the principal, if I may."

"I'll tell him you're here."

In a matter of seconds, she was back. "Will you step in, please?"

The principal's office was a larger version of the secretary's, and he stood waiting, hand outstretched.

"I'm happy to meet you, Lieutenant. I'm Lowell, the principal."

While they shook hands, the secretary withdrew to her own office.

"I know you're a busy man, Mr. Lowell, so I'll be brief. I'd like to talk to the teachers that had Bruce as a pupil."

He went to a large file and thumbed through the folders. "I'll check, just to make sure who his teachers were. I hate to admit it, but most of my personal contact with the pupils is with the troublemakers. Bruce wasn't one of them."

He wrote down the names and pushed a button on his desk. Miss Trask came in almost immediately.

"The lieutenant would like to talk to Bruce's teachers. Would you contact them and ask them to report to the teacher's luncheon I think that would be the best place."

"I'd like to talk to them, one at a time, if that can be arranged," Morrison suggested.

The girl looked over the list. "Mr. Neff is home with a cold. You can see him there." She wrote down the address. "Miss Prather has free period now, so I'll ask her to go first."

The lunch room was pleasant, with a long table, flanked by folding chairs on one side. He waited until the door opened and a slender woman entered.

Miss Prather was no beauty, but he had seen worse. Her mouth was too small for her face, but she had wide brown eyes that gazed at him steadily.

"Lieutenant Morrison?" she questioned.

"Yes, ma'am."

"I am Miss Prather, Bruce Adams' mathematics teacher. Miss Trask said you wished to speak to me."

"Yes, I do. Shall we sit down?"

She walked easily to the couch and sank into it. Morrison chose one of the chairs.

"I can't find out much about Bruce's personality from the people I've talked to, and I thought we might get a more objective viewpoint from his teachers."

"You're probably right. Most teachers have the interest of their

Congress May Try to Close by Weekend

By JOHN H. AVERILL

WASHINGTON (AP) — An adjournment-minded Congress begins lacking a heavy backlog of legislation today in an effort to close shop by the weekend.

But it was a big question whether the legislators could complete their work without going into next week.

Neither Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) nor House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) has set a public target date for adjournment of the 85th Congress. Nevertheless, several other legislators, especially those facing tough re-election fights in November, have expressed strong hope the session can be ended Friday or Saturday.

With the House finished with most of its major bills, the adjournment drive focused on the Senate—which has been alerted to expect overtime sessions this week in an all-out attempt to wind up in the next few days.

The chief bills still awaiting a Senate vote are a measure to increase Social Security benefits, the $3,518,000,000 foreign aid appropriation bill and federal aid to education legislation. All three have passed the House.

A renewed attempt also is expected to get House action on an omnibus farm bill of Republicans and big city Democrats joined last week in defeating a third House attempt at passing a major farm bill.

There also was mounting speculation that the House might act on a Senate-passed bill designed to give the government a stronger hand in regulating labor unions and to give rank and file members a bigger voice in union affairs.

Legislation to require public disclosure of employee pension and welfare funds is awaiting compromise efforts by a Senate-House
